9:00 AM – 10:15 AM: Welcome Remarks & Generative AI and Health: Maximizing Positive Impacts – Megan Jones Bell

Generative AI holds immense potential to address global health challenges, including neurodevelopmental disorders, but its successful implementation hinges on responsible development and deployment. This presentation explores how Generative AI can improve healthcare, and specifically the field of autism care, by enhancing education, assessment, intervention, and access. Key areas include providing accurate information, improving diagnostic accuracy, delivering personalized interventions, and scaling training for providers. We will also discuss Google's initiatives in this space. Ensuring safe, secure, and trustworthy AI models is paramount. We will emphasize the importance of fine-tuning models for specific use cases, protecting user data, and building appropriate trust. Finally, we will address the critical need to ensure consistent model performance for all groups. The goal is to ensure that AI's transformative potential in health benefits everyone, everywhere.
