

Program Manager: Kira Griswold leads LEO NFJP team to serve Michigan's agricultural workers and communities. She brings over a decade of experience leading federally funded governance and community development programs across Latin America. Kira is dedicated to mission-driven public service, motivated to help people realize their potential, and was influenced to work with agricultural communities from her upbringing on a family farm in rural New Hampshire.

Business and Community Liaison: Diana Hernandez Garcia provides state-wide services to NFJP partner agencies and employers. Diana brings experience in workforce development as a Case Manager with West Michigan Works! and NFJP. Diana is passionate about ensuring MSFW communities receive equitable services and is influenced by her family's experience as migrant and seasonal farmworkers growing and picking the food for our tables.

Business and Community Liaison: William Connors focused on connecting the agricultural community with services and opportunities for farmworkers. Bringing experience in program management, contract oversight, compliance monitoring and community partnership. William has developed a strong background in connecting organizations and communities with resources and services. His career experience provides a strong foundation for working within Michigan's agricultural community.

Outreach and Enrollment Coordinator: Abigail Frost supports communities across southwest Michigan. Her background with the USDA Farm Service Agency, combined with her firsthand farmwork experience, growing peaches, apples, and strawberries, strengthens her connection to the agricultural community. Abigail is passionate about agriculture and committed to helping farmworkers and their families thrive.

Outreach and Enrollment Coordinator: Cristo Garcia supports communities across Northwest Michigan and the Upper Peninsula. His work experience as a migrant farmworker and with the Michigan State University High School Equivalency Program motivates his commitment to expanding meaningful opportunities within the agricultural community. Cristo advocates for community collaboration and economic empowerment, helping agricultural workers build self-sufficiency and achieve long-term success.

Outreach and Enrollment Coordinator: Jesus Ruiz Santos supports communities across Eastern Michigan. Prior to this role, he worked with the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services supporting migrant populations. His experience has shaped a strong commitment to advocacy and service, Jesus is dedicated to help individuals and families access resources that promote economic stability, career growth, and long-term success.
