

Procurement is on the front lines like never before,

as organizations navigate market and supply chain shifts, climate risk and an evolving regulatory landscape. In 2024 alone, more than 150 extreme weather events saw supply chain disruptions rise by 119%. Building an effective sustainable procurement program is key to your organization's ability to impact - targeting continuity, cost savings and efficiency - all while reducing climate and social risk.

Organizations implementing sustainable procurement experience multiple benefits:

Increased business value

Reduce procurement costs (by 9-16%)*
Increase revenue (by 5-20%)*
Improved brand perception and reduced brand risk

*World Economic Forum

Resilience, continuity of supply, and long term sustainability impact

Improve stability of supply amidst market fluctuations
Support supply chains already invested in sustainability for the long term
